The Rasch model, named after Georg Rasch, is a family of psychometric models for creating measurements from categorical data, such as answers to questions on a reading assessment or questionnaire responses, as a function of the trade-off between (a) the respondent's abilities, attitudes, or personality traits and (b) the item difficulty. For example, they may be used to estimate a student's ...

Randomness is the lack of pattern or predictability in events. A random sequence of events, symbols or steps has no order and does not follow an intelligible pattern or combination. Individual random events are by definition unpredictable, but in many cases the frequency of different outcomes over a large number of events (or "trials") is predictable.

How does LCA work? LCA supposes a simple parametric model and uses observed data to estimate parameter values for the model. The model parameters are: (1) the prevalence of each of C case subpopulations or latent classes (they are called 'latent' because a case's class membership is not directly observed); and (2) conditional response probabilities--i.e., the probabilities, for each ...
