Teratology is the study of abnormalities of physiological development. It is often thought of as the study of human congenital abnormalities, but it is broader than that, taking into account other non-birth developmental stages, including puberty; and other organisms, including plants. The related term developmental toxicity includes all manifestations of abnormal development that are caused by ...

Yet, in spite of these high failure rates, some firms do survive and prosper over long periods of time. DeGeus (1997) reported that there are a sizeable number of firms that are more than 200 years old. Tripsas (1997) recounts the history of Mergenthaler Linotype, a firm founded in 1886 that has survived three technological revolutions. Fig. 1 contains a list of similarly long-lived firms ...
